Course Overview

Undertaking your ACS Gas and training at Trafford College is more about assessment than it is about learning. The Accredited Certification Scheme (ACS) is the industry recognised and accepted route for experienced gas operatives to gain the certificate of competence needed to become a member of the Gas Safe Register.

Do you need to reassess?

Gas operatives will receive the ACS certificate of competence needed to join the Gas Safe Register - this is valid for five years. Reassessment can take place any time in the six months prior to expiry. It is down to the operative to ensure they are reassessed during this time.

Failure to hold current evidence of competence will result in suspension or removal from the Gas Safe Register, so it is essential to keep your ACS qualifications up to date. At Trafford College we offer ACS reassessment courses.
