Career Options

Combining jewellery making with wellness can lead to unique career opportunities that blend creativity with holistic approaches to well-being. Here are some career options you might consider after completing a short course in jewellery making for wellness:

Mindful Jewellery Designer/Artisan: Create jewellery pieces designed to promote mindfulness, relaxation, or stress relief. Incorporate elements such as natural gemstones, symbols of tranquillity, or aromatherapy features into your designs.

Workshop Facilitator: Lead workshops or classes on jewellery making for wellness, teaching participants how to create their own pieces with intention and mindfulness. Focus on techniques such as wire wrapping, bead work, or macramé, incorporating wellness principles into the creative process.

Freelance Jewellery Artist: Work independently as a freelance jewellery artist, creating custom pieces for clients, selling your designs at craft fairs or online platforms, and collaborating with other artists or businesses on special projects.

Jewellery Instructor: Share your knowledge and skills by teaching jewellery making classes or workshops at community centres, schools, or private studios.

These career options allow you to combine your passion for jewellery making with a commitment to holistic wellness, offering meaningful products and services that support individuals on their journey toward greater health and balance.
